how to trace your Ancestors in county monaghan

*< Every man is his own ancestor, and every man his own heir.
He devises his own future, and he inherits his own past >*

< Genealogy - A search for the greatest treasures, our ancestors >

< introduction

Before beginning a genealogical search from public records, it is essential to collect as much information as possible about the family which is to be investigated. In order to have a reasonable chance of carrying out a successful search, it is generally necessary to know at least three things:

- 1 The Name of the family
- 2 The Parish in which they lived (if the surname is of the popular variety, then the townland of origin is most important or even perhaps a nickname).
- 3 Approximate Date

If this information cannot be supplied, a search can still be made in certain records but the chances of success are small.

< starting point

The starting point for any genealogical search depends on the information one already has. If one is starting with a name, a place and an approximate date, then the best place to begin is as follows:

- > For a person living around 1901 or 1911 Census Returns for those years
- > For a person living in the 1850's or 1860's Griffiths Primary Valuation
- > For a person living in the 1820's or 1830's Tithe Applotment Books

If one also knows the date of a birth, marriage or death, further details can be sought in different records. In cases where the parish or townland in which the family lived cannot be identified, an index to the Tithe Applotment Books/Griffiths Primary Valuation is available showing the parishes in which each surname appears. This index is generally of value only where the name is a fairly unusual one. Otherwise it is likely to yield only a long list of persons of the same surname, with no way of knowing which, if any, are connected with the particular family being investigated.

< sources of genealogy

< census returns

A Census of Ireland was taken every 10 years from 1821. Complete sets of enumerators' returns, the original manuscript forms from which the printed Census reports were compiled, have survived for two years – 1901 and 1911. The returns were arranged by townlands or in urban areas by streets.

The returns for each townland or street include a form filled in by the head of each household, giving the names of all persons living in that household with their age, occupation, religion and place of birth. No enumerators returns survived from the Census of 1861, 1871, 1881 and 1891, these having been destroyed on the orders of the government. There are some returns from the Census of 1821, 1831, 1841 and 1851 covering part of the counties of Antrim, Cavan, Cork, Fermanagh, Galway, Offaly, Derry, Meath and Waterford but not Monaghan.

< Genealogy is like hide and seek, they hide and I seek >

As stated above, the Census of 1901 is the earliest household returns available to the public. The 1901 and 1911 Census for County Monaghan is available on microfilm in the County Library in Clones.

< Primary Valuation & Tithe Applotment Books

While no complete set of Census returns survives for a period prior to 1901, there are two records, which provide a partial substitute:

> Primary Valuation – Also known as Griffiths Valuation. This was a survey of the land and property carried out between 1847 and 1865 for purposes of local taxation. There is a printed valuation book for each poor law union showing the names of all occupiers of land and buildings and of the persons from whom these were leased, the amount of property held and the value assigned to it.

> The Tithe Applotment Book – These were compiled between 1823 and 1837 for the purpose of determining the amount which occupiers of agricultural holdings were to pay in tithes to the established church, the Church of Ireland. The Applotment book for each parish gives the names of occupiers, the amount of land they held and the value assigned to it.

< A family tree can wither if nobody tends it's roots >

< births, deaths and marriages >

A system of state registration of births, deaths and marriages began in Ireland in 1864. Records of all births, marriages and deaths occurring after this date should be preserved in the Office of the Registrar General, Custom House, Dublin 1.

The records for County Monaghan are to be obtained from The Registrar, Births, Deaths & Marriages, Rooskey, Monaghan. The main source of information on births, deaths and marriages occurring before 1864 are parish registers. The surviving Catholic Church Registers for the period up to 1880 are available on microfilm in the National Library of Ireland, Kildare Street, Dublin 2.

The Registers of the Church of Ireland for the period up to 1870 are Public Records. Some of these are preserved in Public Records Offices, while others remain in the custody of the local clergy.

Record commencement dates for County Monaghan are listed below:

If your ancestors were Presbyterian, the Presbyterian Historical Society, Central Public Library, Royal Avenue, Belfast may be able to help. The Society holds some Presbyterian registers and can provide information on others kept by local ministers. The Public Record Office of Northern Ireland, 66 Balmoral Avenue, Belfast BT9 6NY, would also prove useful in your genealogical research.

< gravestone inscriptions

All over the country there are cemeteries and tombstone inscriptions providing details of name and date, which might not be available from any other source. Those not particularly enamoured with the idea of trudging through long wet nettles in an overgrown graveyard in hopeful pursuit of a reference to a long-departed ancestor will be relieved to know that a large number of graveyards have been inspected over the years and the inscriptions recorded. The following gravestone inscriptions have been recorded in printed sources and are available at Monaghan County Library in Clones.

< Newspapers

Below are listed the newspaper holdings of the Monaghan County Library Service. On microfilm, the newspaper can be researched at Clones Branch during opening hours:

> Northern Standard	1839 to present	> The Monaghan Argus	1875 to 1881 1954 to 1959
> People's Advocate	1876 to 1906	> The Dublin Penny Journal	1832 to 1836
> The Farney Leader	1908 to 1909	> The Dundalk Democrat	1849 to 1948
> Clones Weekly Chronicle	1906 to 1908
> Monaghan People	1906 to 1908
> The Anglo Celt	1846 to 2007

< To understand ourselves... we must study the past! >

< Rentals

A major source of information for the genealogist is estate rental books. The vast majority of our ancestors have acquired their properties in relatively recent times. In 1876 only two McKenna families owned land in County Monaghan. Unfortunately, there are very few rentals housed in the County Library but those in our possession include Anketell Estate 1784-1876 and Newbliss Estate 1840 - 1843 and 1852 - 1853. Ballybay Estate 1872.

< Directories

A number of street directories for County Monaghan are available in the County Library, Clones and lists of residents are also to be found in many parish histories.

< Parish Histories

These are another valuable genealogical resource. The Centenary Year of the GAA in 1984 led to the valuable production of club and parish histories. Whether due to lack of club information or indeed club success, most club histories were expanded to include much valuable genealogical information. Publications available through the County Library Service include the club and local histories of the following clubs:

< Family Histories

Burkes Peerage, Burkes Irish Family Records and publications such as Shirley's History of the County give the family history of what the eminent Monaghan historian, Denis C. Rushe called "the local snobocracy". Such material is totally irrelevant to the vast majority of Irish people but the County Library does contain many family histories of local people who had emigrated to foreign parts. Anybody intending to draw up a family tree could consult this material for guidance and ideas.
